Mourning the loss of winter beards

There are a lot of things I love about the men of Chicago. I love the way they proudly wear their Bears/Cubs/Sox/Blackhawks hats even when their team was crushed the night before. I love the steely eyed resolve they display on frigid mid-January nights waiting for an "L" train. But there's nothing I love more about Chicago men than the beards they sport.

Chicago is a city of beards, at least in the winter. Men grow thick, undeniably sexy beards to shield them from developing hypothermia every time they step outside. Warmer than a scarf and way less creepy than a ski mask, seasonable beards have become a staple for Chicago men. And I couldn't be happier about it!

Give me a guy with a beard and I'm fanning myself like a fading Southern belle in a Tennessee Williams play.

Perhaps it's the cavewoman part of my brain left over from millions of years of looking to attach myself to the biggest, hairiest alpha male in the tribe, but there is nothing sexier than a great beard on a man. Beards instantly telegraph virility, strength and capability. Beards are for lumberjacks and Greek kings and other gorgeous testaments to masculine potential. They are for pioneers and epic characters who do and accomplish heroic feats. Hercules had a beard. Hemingway did too. The pirate Blackbeard was said to place flaming coils of rope in his beard during battle to scare the hell out of his enemies (a fear-some image, certainly, though altogether impractical when it came to makeout parties).

A man with a beard seems to be the kind of man who would defend your honor and bravely rid your house of snakes and spiders—or at least call you a cab in the morning.

There are other, lesser breeds of facial hair. The soul patch springs to mind (with a shudder). Some women prefer their men with stubble. They love what that scruffy five o'clock shadow represents: that bad-boy, rebel-without-a-cause defiance of razors and (probably) society. I love it for its potential. Stubble is no more than a baby beard growing sexier with every tiny follicle development.

Woe to the men who can't grow a beard—those poor bastards who suffer the affliction of growing facial hair in patches or strange, sudden hair color changes. They are reduced to a lifetime of never realizing their full potential. The ancient Greeks (I think it was the Greeks, anyway) had a saying: "There are two kinds of people in this world that go around beardless—boys and women—and I am neither one."

Alas, spring is approaching and as the last icicles thaw, beards will return to the endangered list. I beg you, you noble, gorgeous men who grew your winter whiskers with only the intention of keeping your face safe from frostbite: Don't shave! Keep those glorious beards through summer. Do it to keep Chicago beautiful. Do it because it's way easier than shaving. If nothing else, do it for me.

‘Not-so-plain,’ Jane

Mia Wasikowska is not nearly as tightly wound as her corsets—in fact, she’s pretty funny

If Mia Wasikowska had more time, there’s something she wishes she could do in Chicago.

“I would totally do a drive-by [of] Kevin’s house from ‘Home Alone.’ That was my favorite movie when I was a kid,” she said during a chat this month at the Peninsula Hotel, in her first visit to Chicago.

It’s great to see such lightness from the 21-year-old Australian actress, whose recent turns in “Alice in Wonderland,” “The Kids Are All Right” and “Jane Eyre” (which opened Friday), are emotionally intense and quite far from the slapstick comedy of “Home Alone.”

If you’ve never read or seen a version of “Jane Eyre,” Charlotte Brontë’s 1847 novel, here’s the plot in a nutshell: Jane (Wasikowska) is ultraplain and tormented by her family and experiences at boarding school, but the strength of her character ultimately earns the affections of Rochester (Michael Fassbender), who harbors the sort of dark secret not often found in hyper-British costume dramas.

“I really like doing things that are different, and I like doing things that challenge me in different ways,” she said. Surely many young stars in Hollywood would love the luxury to be that choosy.

These days stories such as “Jane Eyre” tend to be modernized or have zombies thrown in. Why isn’t your movie “Jane Eyre Meets Vampires”?

I mean, maybe the next one will be. [Laughs.] I don’t know, I think [director Cary Fukunaga] was conscious of making it fresh and new but not necessarily having to throw in that shock factor thing or [be different] just for the sake of being different.

It could be nice just to have a few zombies living in town so people would never know if they’re about to strike.

[Laughs.] Well, you can talk to [Fukunaga] about that. I’m sure it’s not too late.

So he can just digitally throw some in there?

Put one on the poster and get some guys [to see the movie].

When playing such serious characters, are there some days when you get to work and say to yourself, “I’m in a giggly mood; this is going to be hard to get more intense”?

Yeah, but I am often in a giggly mood or a high-energy, fun mood right before those scenes. And that almost makes that easier to channel that into drama.

How come?

Not easy, but ... with me and Michael, we [had] a lot of fun because we needed to get our energy from the fun, and once you have the energy you can turn it into anything if

‘Jane Eyre’

“Oh, how I do delight in another refined rendition of classic literature. Not really.”

» Read Matt Pais’ full review at redeychicago.com.

WE ASKED, SHE BIT

Mia Wasikowska recently told Movieline about a horse on the set of “Jane Eyre” that would get excited when shooting with handsome co-star Michael Fassbender. I asked if that story had been following her on her press tour.

How prepared are you to use the phrase “horse erection” a lot more than usual? [Laughs.] I’m not going to say that word again. I’ve learned my lesson.

How offended were you that the horse was more excited by him than by you? [Laughs.] That’s just the effect Michael has. On horses. —M.P.

you really let yourself become overwhelmed by the material and the words and the other person.

Would you be interested if someone said, “They’re doing a ‘Home Alone 4’ and you’re playing Kevin’s wife”?

[Laughs.] Um, sure. Yeah. Why not?

What was your reaction when you found out you were starring in “Alice in Wonderland”?

It was something that felt bigger than me. And to be part of it was like, “Wow”—that

Mia Wasikowska
in 'Jane Eyre'
FOCUS FEATURES

they trusted me with that material. And I was just so honored to have been picked by Tim [Burton], who I've admired for so long. And I just so respect him and his work.

What was it like your first day working with Johnny Depp?

It was cool. I was so excited to see what he was going to do 'cause there were no rehearsals. ... I was blown away by it. I didn't recognize him as the Mad Hatter the first time I saw him.

Compared with "Alice in Wonderland," were your corsets for "Jane Eyre" more or less comfortable?

They were so much less comfortable. I didn't realize how wimpy my corset was on "Alice" until they locked me into this one. And it's really an incredible repression. You really get a sense of the repression that people were under in that time. Not only does it squish you in [the torso area] but then you can't really bend over and you can't really reach up and you can't really eat and you can't really breathe. It's a real pain.

What's it like to have only a few movies under your belt and already be a corset expert?

It's pretty cool, but I couldn't complain around Judi [Dench]. 'Cause she's worn them her whole career and they don't faze her at all, whereas I'm complaining away in the corner. MATT PAIS IS THE REDEYE MOVIES PRODUCER.

MORE WITH WASIKOWSKA

What she did in Chicago: "On our way back to the hotel we went past the Bean. I thought that was very cool. I was super impressed. I took lots of pictures."

Another director she wants to work with: Jane Campion ("The Piano")

On her iPod right now: "I have a lot of old music. I like Bob Dylan and Johnny Cash and the Kinks. And Tom Waits and Cat Stevens."

Better Australian band, Men at Work or Silverchair? [Laughs.] "Um, I don't really know either of them very well, but I remember my sister used to listen to Silverchair."

How many mushroom-induced hallucinations she's had recently: [Laughs.] "None since "Alice." "

PAY ATTENTION TO MIA

Mia Wasikowska says serious roles tend to be more satisfying, and right now she seems to have her choice of practically any role and filmmaker she wants. In fact, she recently turned down an offer from director David Fincher to audition for Stieg Larsson's "Millennium" trilogy because of the time commitment it required. Here's what she's got going on. REDEYE

'The Fighter' among the best of boxing films

The Fighter
Available now

By Bruce Dancis MCT

David O. Russell says he got hired to direct "The Fighter" after answering a question from the film's producers about what kind of movie he wanted to make. "I want to make 'Rocky,'" Russell said.

We all like a story about an underdog who triumphs over adversity, but for me, "The Fighter" is a cut above the over-rated "Rocky" films. In the hands of Russell and his excellent cast and crew, "The Fighter" rises closer to the level of the champions among boxing films—including John Huston's "Fat City," Martin Scorsese's "Raging Bull" and Ron Howard's "Cinderella Man"—in its powerful performances, realistic depiction of a particular time and place and pugilistic veracity.

"The Fighter" was one of the past year's most honored films, receiving seven Academy Award nominations, including best picture and director, and winning Oscars for the supporting performances of Christian Bale and Melissa Leo.

Russell's film is based on the real-life story of two boxing brothers, Dicky Ecklund (Bale) and Micky Ward (Mark Wahlberg), and their combative family. Dicky, who 14 years earlier had fought a close fight with the legendary Sugar Ray Leonard, is his younger brother's trainer. But he's also a crack addict whose lucid advice to his brother often is undermined by his irresponsible behavior.

Russell's brilliant pacing quickly unravels the layers of complexity in the brothers' relationship to each other and to their dominating mother, Alice (Leo), who also serves as Micky's manager, and other family members. Micky's once-promising fight career is floundering. It's only when Micky gets someone else into his life, a girlfriend, Charlene (Amy Adams), who's as tough and quick on her feet as Alice, that he takes his first, tentative steps away from his family's control and toward a comeback.

Sex Therapy

Robin Thicke

What makes Robin Thicke's "Sex Therapy" so addictive is the way he bends the latest hip-hop styles to his will. Whether he is surrounded by the spacey stomp of "Elevatas" with Kid Cudi, the Dirty South-fueled "Shakin' It 4 Daddy" with Nicki Minaj or the playful bossa nova of "Meiple" with Jay-Z, Thicke and his smooth vocals remain remarkably on target. He even makes a mash-up of Eurodance rhythms and James Brown funk on "Rollacoasta," with help from Estelle, sound as effortless as his Princely falsetto.

Fight Night Champion

Available now

For various reasons, boxing has diminished as a major sport during the past decade, but you wouldn't know it by playing "Fight Night Champion." Eschewing EA's tradition of focusing its sports titles on real-life superstars. "Champion" instead features a mode that plays like the best boxing movie never made. In it, you are Andre Bishop, an up-and-comer from Philadelphia who must deal with a corrupt fight promoter, an evil rival fighter, even a sibling rivalry. It's part "Rocky IV," part "Hurricane" and all awesome.

Hereafter

Matt Damon stars in Clint Eastwood's film about the different ways three people are touched by death. The director asks what happens when we die, which isn't exactly breaking new ground. The thing that does seem new—or at least a little defiant—about this subdued and meditative film is the way it consistently bucks the conventions of the afterlife movie genre. Eastwood, 80, seems to be combining his no-guff filmmaking style with the expected musings of a person nearing the end of a natural life span.

ALBUM

The Element of Freedom

Alicia Keys

Though Alicia Keys is in fine voice and has constructed even more of her soaring soul anthems on her latest album, the bulk of them sound a little short. "Doesn't Mean Anything" ends up being prophetic. It sounds big and feels important, but it lacks passion and an interesting point of view. It's a pattern she repeats throughout "Freedom." Keys gets a boost from Jay-Z and Beyoncé. B's appearance on "Put It in a Love Song" pushes Keys to change up her phrasing and rhythms, while Jay-Z's influence rubs off on Keys for "Empire State of Mind (Part II)."

Time After Time

8 p.m. Saturday, Hallmark Channel

A 30-year-old disillusioned journalist named Richard (Kaj-Erik Eriksen) heads back to his hometown, rekindles things with his old girlfriend (Christine Chatelain) and gets advice from a 55-year-old guy named Dick (Richard Thomas of "The Waltons"). It's the old time-travel-back-to-your-youth-and-fix-everything tale. But Thomas knows how to invest simple ideas, even far-fetched bunk, with quiet emotion. His younger castmates get the drift, and together they effectively sell their homey hokey. As semi sci-fi, the film's plot seems to violate so many traditional rules of time travel that it's best to just go with the flow. Have Kleenex at hand.

Turning over a new leaf

By Lisa Arnett

Since Old Oak Tap opened three and a half years ago, we've been steady fans of burgers in the beer garden. So when we heard they had spruced up the brunch menu with a slew of new dishes, it was all the reason we needed to plan a visit before the patio opens for the season.

What's new: Old Oak has plenty of options in the eggs department, including three new skillet (such as the Santa Fe with chorizo, avocado and cotija cheese, $10) and three new Benedicts ($10-$13). We had high hopes for the Southern Benedict, made from barbecued pulled pork, a poached egg and roasted red pepper sauce atop a polenta cake. But lacking zing and sharing the plate with limp breakfast potatoes, it just didn't deliver.

We're still thinking about: The fried chicken sliders ($8). More lunchy than brunchy, this dish strayed from what we typically like to order in the a.m., but it totally won us over. The fried chicken wasn't revelatory on its own, but adding crispy fried pickle chips, red onion, garlic aioli and a shake of hot sauce on miniature buttermilk biscuits took the whole thing to the next level.

Sweet stuff: Vanilla apple fritters with maple-brandy glaze ($6) are a sweet, though slightly bread, treat to order for the table. And despite the menu revamp, Old Oak has kept the delicious French toast topped with maple-glazed peaches, honey-bourbon mascarpone and prosciutto ($8), and it's still the best sweet option on the menu.

Fried chicken sliders

Day drinking: The Sunny D (orange Pellegrino with vodka and Grand Marnier) and Pomegranate Sea Breeze (pink grapefruit juice with vodka and pomegranate liqueur) are two new additions to the brunch cocktail menu, but weren't home runs. For the price ($7), I think I'd rather have two rounds of basic (and extraordinarily cheap) $3 bellinis or mimosas next time.

Crowd surfing: Expect to share the space with hip mamas balancing their babies with bellinis and sports fans who don't like sports bars taking in a basketball game at the bar.

Bottom line: Not every new brunch dish is a home run, but we'll always love Old Oak for its rustic look, sweet service and killer patio.

Fianceé or mystery girl?

Monogamy
(Not rated)

Guess what's got freelance photographer Theo's (Chris Messina) attention less than four months before his wedding? Is it the font and color of his and fiancée Nat's (Rashida Jones) invitations? Or could it be the mysterious woman who hired him to take pictures of her engaged in activities such as, oh, pleasuring herself in a park or sleeping with a guy in a parked car? Theo's fixation on the client known as "Subgirl" becomes even more of an issue after Nat is hospitalized for an infection on her finger, which sadly Jones' nurse character from "Parks and Recreation" isn't able to treat.

The buzz: Throw a dart into a bin of indie dramas and you'll probably hit one like "Monogamy" (directed and co-written by Dana Adam Shapiro of the brilliant documentary "Murderball") about New Yorkers and their relationship woes.

The verdict: Riding a seductive yet ominous New York groove, the naturalistic, stage-ready

Chris Messina and Rashida Jones play an engaged couple in 'Monogamy.'

"Monogamy" is most observant about the everyday miscommunications that turn sexual chemistry into feelings of isolation. A less oblivious character than Theo would see the movie's twist coming a mile away. A stronger, more realized character than Nat (played wonderfully by Jones) would express frustration sooner than she does. Yet they're believable as a couple slow to admit anything's wrong and to distinguish between posed/assumed comfortability and real happiness. "Monogamy" demonstrates what you miss in a relationship when you're lost in your own head, and what might not be there when you come back.

1990-91 CHAMPION TEAM

2010-11 CURRENT TEAM

This year's Bulls look strikingly similar to team's first title winner

By Ryan Smith
FOR REDEYE

It's probably premature to compare the current Bulls to the 1990-91 team that started a near-decade-long stretch of domination. But when the old squad stormed the United Center court last week during a celebration of the 20th anniversary of Chicago's first NBA championship, it was hard not to see parallels. But the question remains: Do D-Rose, Noah and crew really have a chance at stacking up to the legendary team led by M.J. and Pippen? Let's find out, faceoff-style.

MVP
	Michael Jordan won the MVP in 1990-91 and Derrick Rose is a favorite to take the award this season. Head to head, there's no contest. Jordan averaged nearly 32 points, six rebounds and six assists while Rose's numbers stand at about 25 points, eight assists and four rebounds per game.
WINNER 1990-91 Bulls
SIDEKICK
	Scottie Pippen was the perfect Robin to Jordan's Batman. In 1990-91, Pip's numbers were good (17 points, seven rebounds and six assists per game) and he emerged as a guy who can do everything—score, pass, rebound and defend. The current Bulls don't have a clear-cut second option. Is it Carlos Boozer? Joakim Noah? Luol Deng? Bueller? Anyone?
WINNER 1990-91 Bulls
SUPPORTING CAST
	Horace Grant (left) was a great rebounder and decent scorer, but the rest of the Bulls beyond M.J., Pippen and Grant were mostly a bunch of role players. Will Perdue, anyone? The current Bulls may not have a defined No. 2 guy, but there are plenty of weapons in the arsenal.
WINNER 2010-11 Bulls
COACH
	Phil Jackson (left) might be the vaunted Zenmaster now, with championship rings for every finger plus one, but in 1990-91 he still was an unproven coach. Still, Jackson's triangle offense seemed to help push the Bulls over the top. Tom Thibodeau (right), meanwhile, is still a bit of an unknown quantity through his first season as head coach.
WINNER 1990-91 Bulls
VERDICT

1990-91 Bulls The sudden success of this current Bulls team has surprised the NBA, but there's still a long ladder to climb before they reach the heights of the team that won 67 regular-season games and beat Magic Johnson and the Lakers in the '91 NBA Finals.

KAKURO

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redyechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

Rihanna revolution

This star never feels the need to hide under an umbrella

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Finally, a star who loves herself! In a fully refreshing interview, Rihanna tells Vogue that she likes her body, including her bodacious curves. She also waxes poetic on her signature coif, telling the mag: "When I cut my hair, the whole sound changed, my style changed." That's definitely an understatement. RedEye hopped in our musical time machine to see just how far Ri-Ri's come.

2006

So fresh and so prom queen! Rihanna's second album, which featured the single "SOS," came out this year—and she was only 18, so we can forgive the pretty princess look.

2007

Bam! This is pretty much what parents think will happen when their kids go off to college. At this point, we think Rihanna's newly "alternative" look seems a little too forced.

2008

Our favorite Rihanna 'do was short, black and choppy—perfect for her sleek personality. This purple dress is a bit too girly for that vibe.

2009

This is what edgy looks like in cold weather. We kind of like this look, even though it's certainly the duller side of Ri-Ri.

2010

The rouge revolution has begun, and she's rockin' it out. Vogue even claims the shade has made a name for itself in the celebsphere—as "Rihanna red," naturally.

2011

Aaaand Rihanna's taken a giant step backward. We don't know who told her this Sideshow Bob look worked on sultry Barbadian women, but it really, really needs to stop.

No-go on Bieber's mo'

Selena Gomez, the much-envied (in some circles) girlfriend of Justin Bieber, did not encourage her boyfriend to stop shaving for a month, as he recently announced on Twitter he would do. Speaking on the Sirius XM Morning Mash Up, Gomez said she told Biebs: "You've gotta commit. You can't just be like, 'All right, let me just do a little one.'" And how's that moustache coming along? "He ... needs a little more time," Gomez said.

HOT DATES

MAY 10-11 That's when "Top Chef: The Tour" will again roll into town. Along with photo ops, this year's event will include a cookoff between two cheftestants to be determined by audience members and local judges (yoo-hoo! volunteering!).

No word yet on which Bravolebrities will be on the bus or where they'll be parking it.

MAY 16 That's the date Lil Wayne is set to release "Tha Carter IV." "It can come out tomorrow 'cause I'm so finished. ... 'Tha Carter IV' will be dropping May 16. If you're not doing anything, do me," Wayne told MTV News. The highly anticipated album will be Weezy's first since being sprung from Riker's Island prison in November.

Achy Breaky Mistakey

Billy Ray Cyrus, best-known for Miley and his mullet, said he's not going to end his 17-year marriage to wife Tish. "I dropped the divorce. I wanted to put my family back together," Billy Ray told the women of "The View" on Friday. He also said his strained relationship with daughter Miley was on the mend: "I feel like we are the daddy and the daughter that we were before 'Hannah Montana' happened." Except she's 18 now.

Not fun, fun, fun

Much-mocked singer Rebecca Black, whose robotic and Auto-Tuned song "Friday" became a viral sensation, said on "Good Morning America" that hurtful Web comments made her cry. "At times, it feels like I'm being cyberbullied," said the 13-year-old, adding, "I don't think I'm the worst singer, but I don't think I'm the best." However, she said one thing would make her happy: "I am in love with Justin Bieber. [A duet] would make my life!"

CC

"It's every band's right, you shouldn't have to do [bleeping] 'Glee.' And then the guy who created 'Glee' is so offended that we're not, like, begging to be on his [bleeping] show. ... [Bleep] that guy for thinking anybody and everybody should want to do 'Glee.'"

—Dave Grohl of Foo Fighters to The Hollywood Reporter, on the music battle between "Glee" creator Ryan Murphy and some bands
